

MEET THE 'TREDAN'—They call it that because it's both a train and a sedan. It is one of four 1954 Ford sedans especially equipped as rail inspection cars by the Illinois Central's Paducah, Ky., shops. Pairs of flanged steel wheels are attached to the front and rear of the car to hold it on the railroad tracks. The changeover from highway to rail operation and vice versa requires only a few minutes.

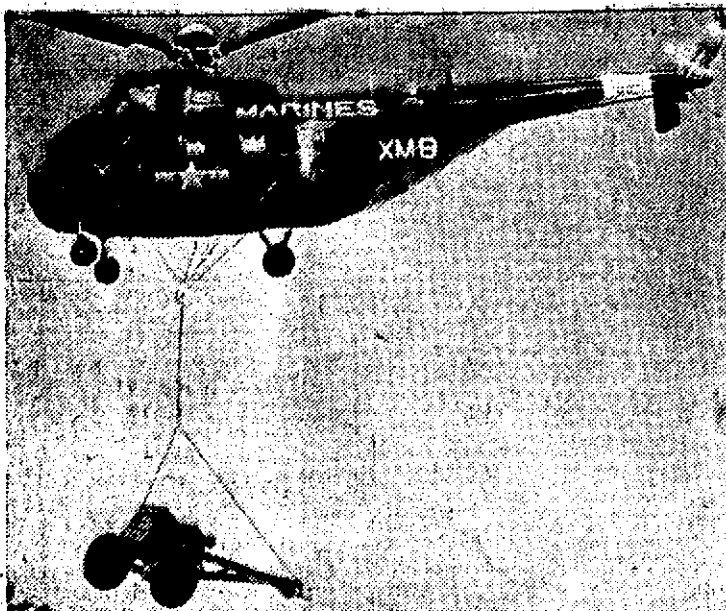

CHOCOLATE ISLAND—Baker Georges Genevois finishes his "masterpiece" in Paris, France. It's a model, complete with interior water and sailboats, of the island abbey Mont Saint Michel on the Normandy coast. It took him 230 hours and 30 pounds of chocolate to make it.

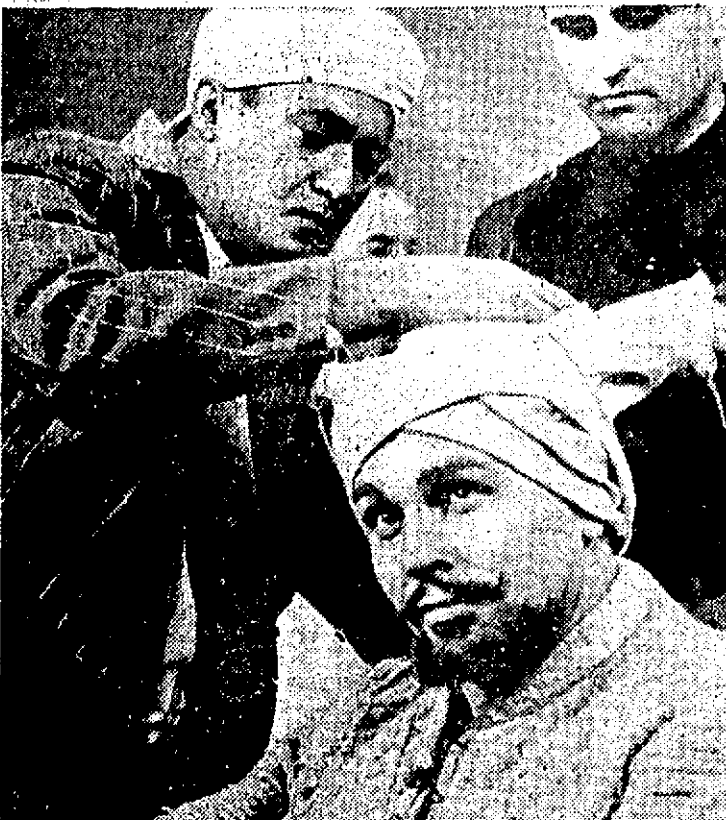

OFF GUARD—Two Papal Swiss Guards relax off duty playing pool in their colorful Renaissance uniforms in red and yellow stripes. The guards are quartered in a wing of the Apostolic palace in Vatican City.

MEMORIAM—In memory of her son, Yuichiro Doi, Midland College football player killed in a practice accident in 1953, Mrs. Haruko Doi has given the Fremont, Neb., college Japanese ceremony. She and her mother wore at their wedding a black one-piece dress when they leave their parents' home and one they wear when leaving the house of their husband's parents, and a white kimono worn to the temple for the ceremony. Here they are displayed by Ruth Matsumoto, 1000 W. 10th St., Lincoln, Neb.

'COPTER GETS NEW MUSCLES—The HRS-3 helicopter lifts a multiple rocket launcher as it undergoes tests at Quantico, Va. The copter features a dome-like device in the center of the rotor blades which gives the helicopter greater lifting strength. It's called an ROR, for Rocket on Rotor. The added strength it provides is also a safety factor in the event of forced landings. The tests are part of the Marine Corps' program to improve helicopters for moving men and equipment.

"THANKS FOR SAVING MY LIFE"—Mark Gowing, 2, of Dayton, Ohio, smiles appreciatively at the man who saved him from drowning last spring. He's James Auld of Canton, Ohio, who recently received the President's Medal of the National Safety Council for the act. Auld applied artificial respiration after Mark fell into a lake near Canton. He learned the life-saving technique at the Republic Steel plant, where he is a steelworker.

THAT COLLEGIATE LOOK—This 1911 model T Ford is the proud possession of Bill Robeson, right, University of Illinois senior at Urbana-Champaign. The 12th auto Robeson has restored in two years, this one has gleaming brass radiator and headlights. A high body and straps to hold down the top. The Chicago student finished it with 18 coats of hand-rubbed lacquer. His only complaint with the car, which averages 28 to 30 miles per gallon of either gasoline or kerosene, was a broken wrist while cranking the car to start it. Examining its four-cylinder engine are, left to right, classmates Gerald Pullon, Princeville, Ill.; John Graves, Wyoming, Ill.; and Max Whitman, Monmouth, Ill.

Bus Strikers in Another Round

LITTLE ROCK, Mo. — Striking bus drivers and mechanics here have won another round in their fight against Capitol Transit Co., for unemployment compensation.

F. P. Fitzsimmons, chief appeals referee of the state Employment Security Division, has upheld ESD Chief of Benefits M. P. Filatreau in ruling that 140 of the union workers should receive compensation of $26 a week.

The bus company is expected to appeal to the Arkansas Board of Review, after that in court if necessary CTC would have to pay part of the compensation.

The strike on city buses in the Little Rock area, which began June 22, has been marked by a number of violent incidents, including shooting and dynamiting. The union has denied any connection with the violence.

With pensions for mentally disabled veterans included plus the cost of building new hospitals, the victims of mental illness comes to total cost for the care in America's over one billion dollars a year.

Junior Iris Garden Club Meeting

The Junior Iris Garden Club met at Oglesby School in the Lunch-room in December. We were each presented with a small square of styrofoam and small sprigs of greenery. We stuck the greenery in the middle of the square, and made small bows of ribbon and wired them on the tree.

Afterward, icicles were hung on the greenery and made a nice center piece. Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Albritton brought a live oak green tree for us to plant and it was planted in back of the school. Each member was presented with a small candy cane.

Dulles Declares West to Best Reds in '56

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles expressed confidence over the weekend the West will make better hay than the Russians in world affairs in 1956. This wasn't surprising.

A secretary of state can hardly be blamed for optimism about his own policies, particularly in an election year. But if he has any-

Political Boss Frank Hague Is Dead at 81

NEW YORK (AP)—Frank Hague, 81, former political boss whose power was rooted in Jersey City, N. J., and reached to high levels of national Democratic politics, died yesterday.

For some 30 years Hague headed an unbeatable political organization in Jersey City. For one of his eight terms as mayor, the machine gave him a fantastic vote of 110,743 to 8,788.

From his Jersey City bailiwick, Hague controlled the Democratic party in New Jersey and for years was the party's national vice chairman.

Hague, who retired as mayor in 1947 and gave up his national party post several years later, died at his Park Avenue residence.

At his bedside were his wife, Jennie, his son Frank Jr., and an adopted daughter, Peggy.

The son said Hague had died of "pneumonia and complications." He had suffered several heart attacks recently.

Hague was born in Jersey City's rough-and-tumble "Horsehoe" section, one of eight children of Irish-born parents. His first job at the age of 16 was on the Erie Railroad but he quickly shifted to politics.

He first was a ward constable, then court clerk, sergeant-at-arms of the State Assembly, custodian of the City Hall, street and water commissioner, director of public safety and finally mayor.

By coincidence Hague died on New Year's Day, a day when, before his retirement, he traditionally held open-house at City Hall and thousands would line up to shake his hand.

On a relatively unimportant occasion Hague once remarked, "I am the law." The phrase stuck to him and for many political observers typified the iron-fisted control he exercised in Jersey City.

Hague in later years recalled he had made the remark in handling the case of two juvenile delinquents. Convinced they were better off working right away than waiting until 18 to leave school, as required by the law, Hague stated, "In this case, I am the law."

"He then got them jobs and later got them to go back to school, too."

When Hague retired in 1947 he picked a nephew, Frank Hague Eggers, as his successor. But the Hague power was waning and within two years the once invincible machine was beaten by a fusion ticket headed by John V. Kenny, a former Hague lieutenant. Hague neither drank nor smoked but was a draper dressed and lived in a rich and comfortable style. His obviously heavy spending at a thing more than hope—if he has any evidence for it—Dulles didn't disclose it.

After outlining the number of American military alliances in 1955, Dulles said: "Thus, the free world has done much to consolidate its position and deter open aggression."

He added: "Now the Soviet rulers turn to other devices. We can be confident that these, too, will fail and that 1956 will further extend the influence of the free world."

He didn't explain what he meant by the Soviet's "other devices." Perhaps he meant their anti-Western propaganda tour through Asia and the economic help they offered there and in the Middle East.

But when he said these devices "too, will fail," he wasn't being clear at all. Because it isn't clear where the Russians failed in 1955.

At the end of the year they seemed to be doing all right. At least they claimed they were, after the big welcome the Asians gave Premier Bulganin and Communist party boss Khrushchev.

Western diplomats seemed concerned about the Russians' trip. And the Eisenhower administration certainly made haste to urge that American foreign aid be continued.

Actually, the Russians' success in Asia—if it was a success—may have been grossly exaggerated. Any success of the trip will have to be proved by later developments. The trip itself was not enough.

Dulles, in his brief statement made in New York, did not go into all the phases of American foreign policy aimed at stopping Russian progress in the world.

But it may be significant that what he did choose to talk about was American military alliances. He has a natural pride in them. In helping build them he became the most traveled secretary of state in American history.

The alliances no doubt have discouraged the Communists from hasty aggressions. And now Dulles may find more time to spend at home thinking in terms far wider than military alliances.

The Russians, by their trips and their tactics, made it plain enough American military pacts can't bottle up their efforts to convert and take over the world.

The United States could become so complacent about the military wall it has built to hem in the Russians, that it might wind up like the pre-war French who dreamed of safety behind the Maginot Line.

VA Rejects Curtailment of Medical Care

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Veterans Administration has rejected Hoover commission recommendations aimed at saving $157,000,000 a year by curtailing free medical care for veterans.

The agency said the commission last March called for tighter controls on free hospital care for veterans whose ailments are not due to their military service, but who say they can't afford private care.

It also said some VA hospitals should be closed and urged that some veterans be charged for hospital care.

VA replied that new safeguards against abuse of the free hospital privilege were imposed some time ago. A check, it said, turned up "only some 200 cases" of possible abuse out of more than 500,000 hospital admissions.

Turning to a commission proposal that 19 VA hospitals be closed, the VA replied that "such sweeping action is not justified at this time." But it promised to continue studies on the matter.

The Hoover group also proposed that indigent veterans admitted to government hospitals because they can't afford private care be required to pay later if they subsequently become able to.

VA said this raised "a serious question" as to whether the government should operate hospitals for pay, in competition with private institutions. It said the proposal also appeared unfair to the veteran.

The Hoover commission also said that VA disability payments to men injured or disabled in service should "be more realistically related to loss of earning capacity."

VA replied that disability ratings are based on average impairment. It said the Hoover group's proposal was based on a "misapprehension of the nature of the compensation benefits as defined by law."

In non-medical fields, the Hoover group said no extension should be granted in the July 25, 1957 expiration date now set for GI home loan benefits for veterans of World War II.

VA took no direct stand on this but pointed out that 11,000,000 veterans still have not used their loan rights. It also noted that the loan guarantee program had had "highly significant" effects on the home building industry and the national economy generally.

A number of the commission's lesser recommendations, or internal organization and other matters, were approved by VA. It said some already had been put in effect.

Hit-Run Death Brings State's Total to Eight

By The Associated Press
The hit-and-run traffic death of an elderly Little Rock woman last night pushed Arkansas' accidental death toll for the long holiday weekend to nine.

All told, seven deaths were in traffic accidents, one person was killed when hit by a train, and another died in a house fire.

The weekend fatalities pushed to 22 the number of violent deaths in Arkansas for the week that ended at midnight last night. Included were 12 traffic fatalities.

Arkansas state police had predicted at least four persons would die on Arkansas roads from 8 p.m. Friday to midnight tonight.

Mrs. Bertha M. Pierce, 73-year-old widow, was killed instantly when struck by a car at Little Rock early last night. Police said she was carrying a meal to another woman who was ill. They said the victim was thrown 75 feet by the impact. Officers broadcast an alert for the car which left the scene.

A 51-year-old Monroe County man was killed yesterday when his farm tractor and a car collided on Highway 17 six miles southwest of Brinkley. He was Everett Earl Nelson, 51, of Allendale.

State Trooper L. E. Gwynn said the collision occurred when Nelson turned left in front of a car driven by Lucille McCall, a Negro school teacher at Forrest City.

An 87-year-old blind Negro woman died Saturday afternoon when her small home in Sevier County burned. She was Katharine Carr of the Paraloma community.

Woodrow Powell, 39, of Briceys, Ark., was killed Saturday when his automobile and another car collided head-on 15 miles east of Marianna on Highway 79.

A 52-year-old Little Rock Negro, Will Butler, was stabbed to death Saturday night. Morgan Bean later was picked up and charged with murder, then released on bond.

Detectives said the stabbing occurred at Bean's house in an argument concerning Butler's step-daughter, Ola Mae James.

When a modern mining company wanted to buy four small islands in Lake Superior, it found the land was held by the U. S. government under a law which made it available only after payment in the scrip given as a bonus to Civil War soldiers and a nationwide search was necessary to locate enough of the scrip.

Husband Puts Money Before Happiness

Dear Miss Dix: My husband has a good job, but every time I want money or something there's a terrible fuss. If the children need money, he nags for hours. I am just about fed up. Some of my children are married, some are still at home. What I'd like to do is find a house big enough so that I can rent rooms in this way support the youngsters myself. How can I go about finding such a house? I have always worked hard and now can't even find a little peace. I've appealed to my husband's people to see if they can change him but, while they realize how bad his disposition is, they can't do a thing.

Answer: A man whose whole interest in life is money, who puts it above the happiness in his wife and children, makes the worst kind of husband. Very rarely can he be changed. Your idea of running a rooming house is good and if you can do it, at least for a while you might bring your man to his senses.

To find this house, look in the classified pages of this newspaper for a week or so until you see what you want.

Too Many Beaus
Dear Miss Dix: I am 19 and very much confused about men. All the dates I have fall in love with me for some reason. They aren't just handing me a line, they're serious!

I try to tell them in a nice way that I don't care to get serious but it doesn't work. I can't stand hurting anyone. I think that is part of my problem. Sometimes I feel like a heartbreaker; it isn't a very pleasant feeling.

Answer: How does it feel to be an irresistible miss? Most girls would be only too anxious to have your problem to handle.

Your aversion to hurting someone is certainly a very major part of your difficulty. If you tell your admirers that going steady is out of the question, mean it. Firmness is necessary. You may say "no" with your lips but "yes" with your eyes, which isn't going to discourage anyone.

Young men are resilient; their feelings won't stay wounded too long, no life will be blighted. But perhaps this doesn't please you too well.

These wholesale attentions are not altogether displeasing to you, so perhaps behind your apparent discouragement there lies the hope that no one will take your objections seriously. One of these days a young man will come along who will disperse them without hesitation.

Dear Miss Dix: I am very much interested in learning to fly. However, I should like to make the ability useful after I have learned. Are there any organizations I might join to do this? I have two small children, so my time is limited to only one or two days a week. Do you think this is a foolish idea?

Answer: Investigate the flying clubs near you. They usually work from private airports. These groups teach you and can suggest ways of putting your newly acquired knowledge to practical use.

Dear Miss Dix: My sister died a few months ago and her husband is planning to marry again. He was a very cruel husband and has been married three times. I understand that the girl he is marrying has never been married before. I'm sure she doesn't know too much about him and wonder if I should tell her. He can put on a good front and has probably convinced the girl of his sincerity. We've known him a long time and have seen his worst side, as a cruel, miserly demanding creature.

Answer: Your conscience would rest if you didn't warn the prospective bride. She probably won't believe you, however. A smooth talker can give an awfully good account of himself.

Serious Crimes Number Drops
WASHINGTON (UP)—The number of serious crimes committed in the United States dropped during 1955 for the first time in eight years, but FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover says "there is little cause for rejoicing."

Hoover noted in a weekend statement that 1954 saw more crimes committed than any previous year on record, and added that in 1955 there were "more than four serious offenses... committed every minute."

A preliminary tabulation showed 2,255,000 major offenses last year. That was a drop of about one-half of one per cent from 1954. Exact statistics will not be available until spring.

Nasser Balks on Conditions of New Dam

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Egyptian Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser has protested hotly against some of the conditions imposed on a British-American offer to help Egypt build a huge dam on the upper Nile River.

Nasser therefore has a choice between Moscow and Washington in this instance.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Byrnes is due to leave Cairo tomorrow for two weeks of consultations here.

It was learned today that Nasser in effect has rejected some of the economic control strings attached to the U. S. British offer to help.

Unless the difficulties can be resolved, this poses a serious threat to the U. S. British offer to help build what would be one of the world's greatest dams and thus, it is hoped, to deliver a setback to Russian designs on Egypt.

The Communists, through Czechoslovakia, already are supplying planes and tanks to Egypt, and Moscow is reported by diplomatic sources to be prepared to put 250 million dollars or more into the dam project.

Nasser therefore has a choice between Moscow and Washington in this instance.

The negotiations over the dam are a prime reason for his return.

Britain and the United States informed Nasser three weeks ago they were ready to give Egypt 70 million dollars as a starter for construction of a great dam, a hydroelectric and irrigation project on the Nile River at Aswan.

The project is estimated to cost around $1,300,000,000 over perhaps 18 years. The Egyptians say they need around 400 million dollars in foreign financing.

Singer Marries Actor's Agent

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—A New Year's afternoon wedding united Monica Lewis, 23, singer, and actress, and Jennings Lang, 44, actors' agent, at the home of Herbert T. Brenner. The couple planned a honeymoon trip to New York. Superior Judge Stanley Mosk and Rabbi Jacob Pressman officiated in the ceremony.

Lang represented actress Joan Bennett when he was shot in December, 1935, by her husband, producer Walter Wanger, who served 102 days of a four months sentence for assault with a deadly weapon.

All Bowl Games Figure to Be Close This Year

By ED CORRIGAN

Of The Associated Press

College football reached a frantic crescendo today when eight of the top 11 teams of the land, sporting a handful of All-Americans met in the four big post-season bowl games.

The Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., the granddaddy of them all, pitted Michigan State against UCLA; the Orange Bowl in Miami sent Oklahoma, the No. 1 team in the country, against Maryland; the Cotton Bowl in Dallas paired Texas Christian against Mississippi, and the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans matched Georgia Tech and Pitt.

All were down for full radio and television coverage as follows:

Rose 5 p.m. EST. NBC radio and TV.
Orange — 2 p.m. EST. CBS radio and TV.
Cotton — 2 p.m. EST. NBC radio and TV.
Sugar — 2 p.m. EST. ABC radio and TV.

All games were figured to be close and, in fact, no team was rated better than a one-touchdown favorite at kickoff time. Michigan State rated one touchdown over UCLA as did Oklahoma over Maryland, Texas Christian over Mississippi and Georgia Tech over Pitt.

The official weather forecasts were favorable in all four cities. The sun was out everywhere except New Orleans where there was some cloudiness.

GREAT Circle

BY ROBERT CARSE

CHAPTER XXV

The Obis lay even to the keel, glistening in the calm, cerulean water, and when the spars were sent aloft they also glistened in the sun.

Captain Jared Naish leaned against the freshly sanded and painted quarter rail and gazed up with keen pleasure at Kauai on the main topgallant mast. Kauai rode a bosun's chair. He waved gayly and men who handled the halyards on deck hauled shouting in unison to hoist the yard.

"A handsome ship, sir," Naish said.

Mr. Bothwick had just come up the companionway and Naish saw that he wore clean duck trousers, a shirt, a tarpaulin hat and sandals. Since the last of the rats had been cleaned out, Mr. Bothwick preferred to live aboard, coming only rarely ashore.

"Yes, captain," he said stiffly. "She is that."

"You're relieved?" Naish said. "More surprised than relieved, sir."

"Why?"

"To see the work done at all," Naish granted. "You and I agree right there. But you're the new chief mate, mister, and in charge of her keep homeward-bound."

"With the Indian as second mate, sir?"

Naish took time to answer. There was he told himself, no insult to Kauai intended in the misuse of the word "Indian." That was a common sailor's term, and as far as the fact could be reckoned the atoll folk had originally come out from India.

But the sense of caste, of place was very strong in Bothwick. Back in Gloucester, his family would be quite happy to know that he'd risen to the rank of chief mate and yet they'd regret that the mate directly subordinate to him had received his only formal ship instruction in some jacksass missionary schooner. There was undoubtedly also in Bothwick's mind a trace of the typical New England belief that the best sailors came from her shore, and after all, wealthy as they might be, and skilful traders, great bankers and philosophers and scholars, no man among the Indian, or the Chinese people either, had anything to do with the invention of modern navigation. That was just about the sole creation of Captain Nathaniel Bowditch of Salem.

"Aye," Naish said quietly. "Kauai will see a second mate. I've already signed him to the articles. But you know of a better man?"

"No sir. I've doubted though, if he'll be able to handle the crew."

"You and I will be responsible for such," Naish said. He let his voice sharpen with anger. "And as to standing watches, I'll be on deck with him."

"Then how soon do you calculate we'll sail, sir?"

"Three days from now. The work will be done tomorrow, but I've fixed it with Mata'ora to supply us with fruit and fish. The men must get off shore for the catch, and it has to be smoked and salted. On the last night, too, Mata'ora wants to give a feast for us. I've promised him another cask of prime oil."

Bothwick hitched at the plaited sennit belt that held up his trousers. He set his feet firmly and looked with a straight stare at Naish. "An anchor watch should be maintained aboard," he said. "Those youngsters clamor around the ship like monkeys. They might get into the lamp locker or the hold and set fire to her."

"Let be, mister," Naish grinned and cracked Bothwick on the shoulder.

"The day before sailing is time enough for watches. You've worked hard. Slack off and begin to enjoy yourself."

"That's an order sir?" Bothwick said. Although he still met Naish's glance, he smiled.

"Take it so," Naish said. "Get ashore. Kauai will keep an eye on the rest of the work to be done today."

"You trust him greatly," Bothwick said. "And you seem to have no doubt that some of the lads might skip the way Finniedid."

"Kauai knows his work," Naish said. "Nor do I worry about the lads. Their pride is up. They want to show the local folks they're real sailors and to prove it they rig the ship. The entire lot of them, too, will go home a good sight better off than when they left. I've increased the cargo lay for all hands."

"I am glad sir," Bothwick said earnestly. "They'll need something to console them off the Horn."

Naish's hands closed to fists. He took a step toward Bothwick. Here brought into the open was the fear that could disaffect the crew, the fear that ship from ever getting home. Bothwick as chief officer should know better than to express it. If the men remembered the Horn too well, they'd refuse to sail and the ship would stay off the atoll until her bottom planks rotted through and she and her cargo were a total loss.

"Get ashore," Naish said. "That's not the kind of talk for the crew to hear, or you to speak. Don't be a chowder-head!"

The women had been cooking on the beach throughout the day since the flush of false dawn, and the men had built the fires for them in the pits that held the suckling pigs, the chickens and the bonito and maccherel. Piles of plantains were ready.

It was to be the farewell feast for the crew of the Obis.

Conference Play in Basketball Gets Underway

By BEN OLAN

Of The Associated Press

The King of the Queen City tournament will be crowned in Buffalo tonight, heralding the end of the holiday tournaments and the start, in most cases, of conference basketball competition.

Georgia Tech and Xavier of Ohio clash in the upstate New York finals. Tech, qualified by knocking off Canisius and Westminster Pa while Xavier made the grade with victories over Niagara and St. Bonaventure.

While the title game is going on, the Big 10 will open its season with four contests.

Ohio State, a slight favorite to dethrone Iowa as league champion will take on Michigan. Northwestern faces Indiana, Michigan State meets Illinois and Purdue tackles Wisconsin.

Other games match Auburn and Florida, Detroit and Bradley, Wichita and Houston and Pitts-burgh and Yale.

San Francisco's Dons, winner of 36 straight and E.C.A.C. champs are idle until Friday when they're expected to breeze past Pepperdine.

Here's the way the conferences shape up:

Atlantic Coast—North Carolina State is favored but North Carolina is expected to make it close.

Southern — George Washington has the best record in league and nonleague action. Furman and West Virginia are expected to give the Colonials trouble.

Ivy—No team is undefeated, Yale, Dartmouth and Columbia look best in that order.

Southwest — Southern Methodist and Rice are rated one-two.

Missouri Valley — Tulsa and Houston appear to have the edge. Houston never has won the league title.

Big Seven—Iowa State won the tournament and is favored to cop league crown.

Southeastern — Kentucky probably will take a back seat to Vanderbilt and Alabama. Mississippi also is highly rated.

Skyline — Montana has best pre-season record. Should get plenty of competition from Brigham Young and Utah.

Pacific Coast — Stanford and California look this close. Stanford is undefeated in six games.

Lause and Others Want Shot at Ray

By The Associated Press

Ray Robinson's return to the middleweight heights appears to have stirred up new fire in the 160-pound class with top contenders ready to fight it out for a crack at the winner of the Robinson-Bobbo Olson rematch.

Although Robinson talks of going to France to box Charles Humez and plans a summer match with welterweight champion Carmen Basilio, the backers of Eduardo Lause, Rocky Castellani, Tiger Jones and others are clamoring for a shot.

Lause risks his 31-fight winning streak at Madison Square Garden in New York Friday NBC-radio and TV against Milio Savage, 30-year-old Salt Lake City veteran of 76 fights. Lause's last two victories were a decision over Gato Cylone Fullmer and a TKO over Johnny Sullivan.

Fullmer, beaten only three times in 35 starts, will try to wreck Rocky Castellani of Cleveland, another high flying challenger, in the Wednesday show at Cleveland Arena ABC-radio and TV.

The Monday fights from St. Nicholas Arena in New York Dumont continue to stress new faces instead of names by sending Miguel Berrios, Puerto Rican busy-body, against Pat Marcune, Brooklyn featherweight.

U. S. Grant Made to University

WASHINGTON, (AP) — A federal grant of $14,850 has been made to the University of Arkansas School of Medicine to finance a study of the effects of the general duty of physicians in record-keeping.

It was one of a number of grants totaling $401,900 announced yesterday by the U.S. Public Health Service for research in improving hospital services.

Heading the Arkansas research will be Dr. Donald D. Stewart of the University Hospital staff at Little Rock.

Summer Police Course Suggested

STUTTGART, Ark. (AP) — A summer course in police work at the University of Arkansas has been suggested by Garner Allen, news editor of the Stuttgart Daily Leader.

Allen wrote Arkansas legislators, judges and mayors proposing a new department be established in the University School of Law with courses in "investigative work, traffic control, public relations and courtesy to the public."

Sudan Starts Course as a Free Nation

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP)—The Sudan was embarked on its course as a new independent nation today after nearly 57 years of joint rule by Britain and Egypt.

A cheering Parliament yesterday heard Premier Ismail El Azhari read the proclamations announcing recognition of the country's independence by its former rulers. Thousands of other cheering Sudanese lined the streets to hail the premier following the parliamentary session.

The British and Egyptians had jointly ruled the Sudan under a condominium. In an agreement concluded Feb. 12, 1953, Britain and Egypt laid out a three-stage schedule for Sudanese self-determination.

It called for election of a Parliament, formation of a government under international supervision and a three-year transition period for the country to choose union with Egypt, independence and possible membership in the British Commonwealth after independence.

The Sudanese rapidly bypassed that schedule.

The National Unionist party of El Azhari gained an absolute majority in Parliament in the first general election in November, 1953. El Azhari ruled out membership in the British Commonwealth soon after he was chosen premier.

The movement for union-with-Egypt collapsed soon after Sudan Egypt collapsed soon after Sudan-born Mohamed Naguib was deposed as President of Egypt late in 1954.

The Sudanese Parliament voted last August to decide the country's future by plebiscite instead of in a constituent assembly as provided by the British-Egyptian agreement. Britain and Egypt agreed.

Premier El Azhari leapfrogged that agreement Dec. 15, however, when he announced a ewas going to proclaim outright independence. He got a unanimous vote from Parliament for such a move four days later.

Britain and Egypt again said they would agree and recognize the country's independence.

A temporary Constitution was approved by Parliament Saturday to serve until a constituent assembly can draw up a permanent charter. A five-man commission was sworn in to take over the governor general's duties.

Rival Coaches All Praise for Each Other

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Although every rose may have its thorn, there hasn't been a single thorn of controversy to mar the buildup for today's 42nd annual Rose Bowl classic.

Rival football coaches Red Sanders of UCLA and Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State have been operating like a mutual admiration society in sweet-talking each other.

The pair actually are good friends and have a solid respect for each other's coaching ability. For instance, Daugherty had Sanders as the visiting expert at his football clinic last Spring.

From the tone of the talk, you'd think both hearts would be breaking because they have to send two outfits of muscle-laden bruisers out to bump heads against each other.

Daugherty's Irish wit and down-to-earth honesty have made a big hit on the cCoa L The softspoken Sanders has been equally amiable to all.

No one has been able to worm a mean word about the opposition out of either coach. Veteran writers at the Rose Bowl scene say it's the first time there hasn't been some kind of tempest-in-a-teapot quarrel before East met West in the bowl battle.

Porks Open Plan Against Missouri

By The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference preview of the championship race last week showed that Southern Methodist still was the team to beat. The real thing starts Wednesday, the games that count in the official standings.

Southern Methodist does a re-take of its victory in the final of the pre-season conference tournament, meeting Rice.

SMU tackles Temple Tucker and his pals at Dallas. At the same time Texas and Texas Christian didn't appear up to the class of the other five.

Arkansas opens the week with a nonconference game, meeting Missouri at Fayetteville Monday night. Saturday night Arkansas opens conference play, engaging Baylor at Waco. Texas A&M plays Rice at Houston. The big one that night is expected to be a battle of Southern Methodist and Texas at Austin. Texas is considered the dark horse of the campaign.

The week's feature is the Wednesday night class of Rice and Southern Methodist. SMU had to struggle in overtime to beat Rice 76-73 for the tournament title.

Rice carries a scoring average of 80.4 per game into the championship race while SMU has averaged 75 and Texas 75.7. SMU with most of the fellows back who led it to the conference championship last season, won the tournament on poise in the clutch and accuracy from the free throw lane.

Cold Weather Plagues the Midwest, East

By The Associated Press

A cold wave gripped the Northeast today while snow and rain plagued sections of the Midwest. Freezing cold early today pushed the mercury to 16 below at Syracuse and 1 below at Albany. The cold spread southward into central Tennessee and parts of Virginia.

In the Midwest, temperatures ranged from the 40s in southern Illinois to the 20s in northern Wisconsin with isolated cold spots. It was 1 below at Bemidji, Minn., but 21 above at Duluth on the shores of Lake Superior.

Snow reached as far south as central Illinois during the night while enveloping an area ranging from Northern Iowa and Indiana through Wisconsin and into southern Minnesota. Snowfall ranged from about one to four inches. Rain and snow mixed throughout Iowa, Illinois and some sections of Indiana.

HOPE STAR'S MYSTERY FARM CONTEST

Mystery Farm No. 6

Here's How the Contest Works — — —

Each week, Hope Star will picture an aerial view of a farm located in the Hope Trade Area. Sixth in a series of "Mystery Farm" photos is pictured above.

No one on the Star staff knows whose farm this is, but if the Owner will stop in and identify his farm, he will receive a beautiful mounted aerial view picture.

The "Mystery Farm" will be identified in Hope Star the following week and the winners names will be published. Only one winner each week to an immediate family.

The contest is open to everyone except employees of Hope Star and their families, the County Agent, Home Demonstration Agent, their office staffs and their families.

Watch for these photos each week, for a picture of your farm may be included in this series. We hope you will enjoy this contest and take an active part in it.

The "Mystery Farm" series is sponsored by the merchants shown on this page.

Here's What You Win — — —

The first person coming to Hope Star office and correctly identify the "Mystery Farm" will receive two passes to the Saenger Theatre. You must register your answer at the Star office.

Hope Star will award prizes to the first three (3) persons correctly identifying the "Mystery Farm." Merchandise Certificate Award of: $5.00, $3.00, $2.00 will be given the first, second and third place winners each week. Certificates must be used with any Advertiser appearing on this page.
